

IT Media Coordinator

HOTinternational

Eloka Humphrey Ifezue is a highly accomplished computer science professional, born in 28 March 1998 at Kwara state, Western Nigeria, but originally from Anambra state. As the best graduating student at Caleb University, Eloka has proven to be an exceptional student and a natural leader.

Eloka's passion for technology and desire to make a positive impact on the world has led him to achieve certification as a Qualys specialist, Splunk Admin, Google IT specialist, Programming and SOC analyst. He has also gained invaluable experience working in various roles in the tech industry, including as a Network Engineer at Hoop Telecoms and a Backend Engineer at Primaboost. In these roles, Eloka provided crucial support to ensure the smooth running of network infrastructure and played a key role in developing cutting-edge software solutions for clients.

In addition to his work in the tech industry, Eloka is a dedicated youth ambassador for the World Literacy Foundation. He has organized several seminars in collaboration with regional tech hubs to empower local community youths with IT skills and knowledge, demonstrating his commitment to making a positive impact on the world.

Eloka is also an avid reader of tech-related articles and enjoys playing video games and spending time with family and friends. His motto in life, "being persistent isn't enough, be consistent too," is a testament to his work ethic and determination to succeed. With his exceptional academic achievements and professional experience, Eloka is a true asset to the tech industry and a leader in his field.